North Cesar 09 Kiteboard Review (10th Oct 2008)

Background:

"The second largest in the Pro Range (135cm), the Cesar Pro is sized to match Cesar's power-house approach to freestyle. Fast, aggressive and hard.

Thanks to the new construction materials and increased size we were able to develop the perfect board for the most powerful and radical freestyle. The wood construction with nuclear carbon provides a massive pop, easy control and extra good riding comfort. The new size makes this board the perfect machine for hardcore landings and technical moves. This is the great successor of the Cesar 08, you'll love it!"

Bracklesham Boardriders Team Rider, Scott Bourn, had the opportunity to spend a whole month of constant kiting in Brazil, using the latest North Cesar 2009 Pro kiteboard. Here's what he says-

Having rode the North Cesar 2007 and 2008, I ordered the Cesar 09 model for my Brazil trip.

I was lucky to get it as they had not been released in the UK, but managed to get it delivered the day before my trip - thanks to James from BBR - www.northkites.co.uk and Callum from North UK.

My First impression of the board was "WOW this is thin and super light" compared to the last models. I was a bit worried that it was going to have way too much flex and was worried about the strength of it as it seems half the thickness of the last models.

But, I've been on it every day for over a month and WOW what a board!
It's got everything you want in a board with it being a 135 in length it's insane for freestyle but still giving you amazing up wind performance and the stiffness for freestyle.

It's also a real popping machine - you can really load this board up to give you the massive pop we are all looking for !! And, with it having the bit extra flex this year it's makes the HARD landing a bit softer on the knees.

Speaking of hard landings - the new foot pads... Oh yes North have done an insane job on the pads this year. They are super comfy and you can really hold onto the board so much better with the honey comb grip.

I have used this board in Super choppy water and super super flat water (Brazil lagoon) and for me it works really well in both conditions !

Great Board!

Scott
